attended by the young and near young of the village. Various games appropriate for the season were enjoyed and a lunch served.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lougee were called to Compton, Que., last week Friday by the death of Mrs. Lougee's mother, Mrs. John Harden, which occurred at her home Oct. 28th.
Mrs. Harden had been in poor health for several years but her death came very unexpectedly, heart failure being the immediate cause of death.

The funeral of Stilman Corliss was held at the home of his son, Chester Corliss, Monday, Rev. O. E. Barnard officiating. Mr. Corliss had been very ill the past two weeks with grip, heart failure being the final cause of death. Mr. Corliss is survived by four sons, Frank, of Manchester, N.
H., Leon, Bert, and Chester of this place.

About eighty members of the K. of C., their wives and friends enjoyed a Hallowe'en party Thursday, October 28, in Woodmen hall. The hall was very prettily decorated in black and orange, with pumpkins and shaded lights. The ladies present were dressed as ghosts, and together with the witch, fortune teller and black cats, it was a very weird scene.
Games were indulged in until supper time, such as pinning on the donkey's and cat's tail, and other fun-making contests after which a most bountiful supper was served and after everyone had eaten their fill of "good stuffs" such as Island Pond lardies are famous, old and modern dances prevailed until a late hour.

George GiBoin, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. GiBoin of Spring street, Portland, a former Island Pond boy perhaps better known here as George Steady, who has been studying the organ under Alfred Brinkler for the past five years, will have full charge of all the church music and will organize a sanctuary choir of boys at Andres church, Biddeford. Mr. GiBoin sang under Father Powers of the Cathedral here years ago, so has received splendid instructions on that line. Mr. GiBoin is young and many of his friends expect a great deal from him in the future.

School Notes.

Rhetoricals were held Friday afternoon in the high school room.
There was a program of music, reading and speaking, lasting about an hour. The grammar school attended but did not take part.

The teachers' meeting held Friday evening, October 29, was a most enjoyable occasion. There were limericks on everyone who attended, which were very amusing. Hallowe'en games were played and delicious refreshments served.

Superintendent Darling is visiting the schools this week.

There was no school in the two lower rooms Monday as Miss Webster and Miss LaRoche visited schools in Canaan.

There were several absences Monday on account of church services.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

On Tuesday afternoon the W.
C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs.
P. H. Dale, with a large attendance of members and invited guests.

The meeting was in charge of Mrs. H. E. Randall and the subject of the afternoon was "Bread." Original, interesting and very helpful papers were given by Mrs.
Parsons on "Different kinds of "Yeast—Kinds, Effect on the System and Effect on Bread." By Mrs. Lawton on "Is Housework Drudgery?" and by Mrs.

Dale on "The Influence of a happy table upon our lives."

A report of the recent W. C.
T. U. state convention was given, and Mark Twain's, "The Captain's Story," was humorously read by Mrs. Morong.

Four new members were initiated and Miss Portia Dale rendered pleasing music.

The hostess served daintily, and the company dispersed, pronouncing the afternoon most pleasant and profitable.

How an Author Achieved Success

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Elliott Kenton was writing a Sicilian story in his room in a tenement building in which various nationalities had their abodes. His first dwelling place since he had begun writing was a handsome bachelor apartment house.
He had not found literature profitable and had moved from time to time, each move carrying him downward.

His literary aspirations had come down with his ill success. He had begun by "firing over the heads of the people" and had ended by firing low enough to cut off some people's toes.
This was what he was writing at the present time:

"This detective who has come among us, who seeks for evidence to convict our most valuable members, must be abandoned. I shall rely on you and the others to keep me advised of his movements and inform me of the opportune moment to strike him. Send me word at what hour he usually goes out—whether he is alone or attended. Does he ever cross the park?
If I can catch him there, where the danger of witnesses would be at the minimum, I would finish him at a single blow." Kenton wrote this twice, and selecting the copy that he liked best, he threw the other on the floor. Then he went on with his story, which ended with a certain person known only as "the detective" being murdered in cold blood while crossing the park.

It was late in the afternoon when Kenton finished the last chapter and, wrapping up his manuscript and addressing it to a publisher, went out with it, dropped it in a receptacle for bulky mail and proceeded to a restaurant for dinner. In the evening, having a deadhead ticket to a movie theater, he attended a play and about 11 o'clock started for his room. As he approached he saw a number of men standing before the entrance, among whom were several policemen. On drawing nearer he noticed that the front of the building in which he lived was scattered on the pavement and the street.

"What's the matter there?" he asked a man coming toward him from the wrecked building.

"Bomb," said the man as he hurried on.

Kenton paused. He knew that the building had been filled with a miscellaneous people, including German, French, Norwegian, Italian and other nationalities. He did not relish the fact that he was a roomer there might be mixed up with this bomb throwing business.

He turned to walk away, was seen by a policeman and followed, the fact of his turning having excited suspicion.
The policeman took him to the building, where the owner, standing among the others, recognized him.

"That's the man," said the landlord.
"What man?" asked the policeman.
"The man that rooms where you found the note."

A pair of handcuffs were clapped on Kenton's wrists, and he was taken to a police station. The landlord went along as a witness. There was a preliminary examination, at which the landlord swore that Kenton occupied a room in which an incriminating paper was found. Then the prisoner was put into a cell.

The next morning, when Kenton was wondering what it all meant, a lawyer was ushered to his cell who said that he had been retained by certain parties to defend him, but that the defense would not amount to anything. The prisoner's friends rallied rather upon terrorizing any witnesses that might testify against him. "But why," asked the attorney, "were you so careless as to leave that letter where it would be readily found?"

"What letter?" asked Kenton.
"That letter to the gang announcing that you were ready to kill the detective."

"I never wrote such a letter."
The lawyer shrugged his shoulders.
"For heaven's sake, man," cried Kenton, suddenly remembering his story, "you don't mean that they have found a scrap of my Sicilian story?"

"They found a letter offering if those to whom it was written would put the write on to now to get a certain defective you would do him."

"Why, that is fiction."
"Fiction be hanged! You can't play that game with the public prosecutor, but you needn't be afraid. That letter doesn't prove that you threw the bomb.
It's only circumstantial. You keep quiet. Your friends have got it all fixed, and you can't be convicted."
"You needn't consider yourself my counsel. I'll take care of my own case."

With that the man of law departed, and Kenton sent for a friend who was also an attorney. When the latter arrived Kenton told him that he had got into a fix from writing a blood and thunder story and must be helped to whom his client's manuscript had been submitted with a copy of the scrap of paper that had been picked up and found its place in the novel. He succeeded in procuring Kenton's release without his being brought to trial.
The incident attracted the publisher's attention to the story and procured a reading for it. The reports concurred that the story was thrilling and especially adapted to the class of readers the firm desired to reach. It was published, was a great success and established the reputation of the author.

$250,000 Fire in Car Barns

Boston, Nov. 2.—The Boston Elevated suffered a $250,000 loss when fire destroyed the car barns in East Boston, together with twenty-two semi-convertible, prepayment cars.
Three men were injured, two snowplows burned and the clothing of forty conductors and motormen was also destroyed.

The Wilson-Galt Wedding

Washington, Nov. 2.—President Wilson and Mrs. Norman Galt authorized the announcement that their marriage will take place near the close of December. Their plans are for a very simple ceremony at Mrs. Galt's residence.

Burglars Rob Jeweler's Safe

Boston, Nov. 1.—Unset diamonds, jewelry and money amounting to $5000 were stolen from a safe in the establishment of Hyman Levin, credit jeweler. It is believed two or three men were responsible for the job.

Killed by Autoists

Bridgewater, Mass., Nov. 1.— Automobilists who ran over and killed William F. McFadden, 25, dragged his body fifty feet and disposed of it by throwing it over the rail of a bridge into Skunk river, the police of this town believe.

Maine Town Has $100,000 Fire

Winthrop, Me., Oct. 31.—The entire oil cloth manufacturing plant of C. M. Bailey Sons & Co., in this village, and two dwelling houses were burned by a fire which started in the factory. The total loss is more than $100,000.
